

Dependency injection in one picture

DI

You declare the need; the container supplies it

You stop writing ``new``. Spring hands you what you asked for.

- 1 Your class declares: I need a ``UserRepository``.
- 2 Spring finds one, builds it, and passes it in.
- 3 Your class never knows which implementation it got — that is the point.

REMEMBER

Testing becomes easy because you can hand it a fake instead.

